The Normal Department of Gould's Academy wishes to extend hearty thanks to the townspeople, merchants and students of Bethel for their help and patronage at the exhibit of Hold-en pictures last Thursday evening. The net proceeds of the entertainment were $23.50 and with this money, some much needed apparatus will be bought. Sand table, hectograph, paper cutter and chart marker are among the things for which this money will be used.

The Normal Class is unusually large this year, and the girls are working with great enthusiasm and earnestness. They hope to be able to co-operate with the townspeople and with the teachers of the district in every way possible and will welcome suggestions at any time. Visitors to any of the classes are always welcome.

CROSS ILLUSTRATED LEC-TURE.

The Senior Class of Gould's Acad-emy has engaged Prof. Geo. N. Cross to visit the Academy and give his new illustrated lecture, "America, The Lesson in Patriotism," on Thursday evening, Oct. 25, at eight o'clock, in the Assembly Room.

At three o'clock on Thursday afternoon Prof. Cross will speak to the members of the school and their friends in the Assembly Room, his subject being, "Lloyd George and His Won-derful Life Story." Prof. Cross is a highly cultured man and a very interesting speaker, as Bethel people know, and all who are interested in the most vital questions of the day are cordially invited to be present and listen to these addresses.

No admission will be charged in the afternoon. Tickets for the evening lecture can be secured of any member of the Senior Class for 25c each.

BURKE—ADKINS.

There was a quiet wedding Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Adkins of So. Paris, when their daughter, Miss Laura Esther Adkins, became the bride of Albert Ira Burke of Bethel. Only the immediate members of the two families were present. Decorations were of house plants, ferns and pinks. The bride wore a gown of blue silk and Georgette crepe, with gold embroidery and carried bride roses. The bridal couple were unattended. Rev. G. H. Newton officiated, using the double ring service.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Burke left the next morning for a trip to the White Mountains in their car, and after their return will reside on Vernon street, Bethel, where they have a home furnished ready for occupancy.

Mr. Burke is a native of Bethel, and has always resided there. He is in the business of plumbing and steam heating, with a shop at Bethel. The bride is a graduate of Paris High School in the class of 1915, and since graduation has taught for two years in the schools of Paris. She is a member of the South Paris Baptist church, has long sung in the choir, and has just resigned as teacher of a class in the Sunday school on account of her approaching marriage.

Numerous gifts in cut glass, silver, chinaware, and other things have been received.—Oxford Democrat.

HARVEST FAIR AND HARVEST SUPPER.

At Methodist Church, Bethel, Thursday, October 18.

This year we may rightly call our Harvest Fair and Supper a patriotic occasion, for it would meet Mr. Hoover's approval. As usual vegetables and fruits are given a prominent place.

We planted our gardens, last spring, as he told us to do, and now we invite you to come and partake of the results of our labors. Of course you will show some of your patriotism by accepting the invitation.

Perhaps your own garden will not supply all your needs. Just come down and see if you cannot find what you want on our vegetable table.

It is a wise saying that "time is money." In these days time is more than money—it is patriotism. Instead of making the apron you need, get it at our apron table, and spend the time you would use in making it in knitting or that sweater or sewing on garments for the soldiers.

Our harvest supper is at 6:30. It is not a meatless one, for we shall have meat to make the vegetables more hearty and appetizing. Please remember that we serve both meat and vegetables, besides many other good things, for thirty-five cents. Mr. Hoover urges economy, and this time the economy is on your side. Be economical, and take advantage of this great supper bargain. You cannot afford such bargains every day, with meat so high. Our harvest supper needs no description. And do not forget that "P" stands for "Patriotism" and also for "Pumpkins," and that "Pumpkin" means "Patriotism."

Come and partake of our abundance, and save your bread for another meal.

This may not be absolutely a wheatless supper, but wheat will not be "the staff of life" at this meal. Come and see how well you can do without it.

Ice cream will probably be on sale, and you can afford it, as you will get a fifty cent supper for thirty-five cents.

Remember the day. Thursday afternoon and evening of this week.

Cloth-covered openings should have new cloth or at least the cloth should be washed, for after a season's use the pores of the goods are sure to be filled with dust. Cover the door with a good generous litter and when you feed scatter the grain in it so that the birds will have to take plenty of exercise. Birds must have exercise to keep them in good health.

Always remember that over crowding is dangerous and is an expensive proposition. If you cannot house all the birds you have it will pay you to dispose of the less desirable ones.

With fewer birds you can give them better care and make them more comfortable. You will have less of an expenditure for feed and at the same time you will find that these fewer and better birds will produce more eggs than the larger flock that was working under disadvantage due to overcrowded conditions.

If you have taken your pullets off the range supply them with green feed, and it will probably be advisable to give animal matter more freely. If birds are not taken off the range you can continue giving them the same ration as they have been getting.

START YOUR PULLETS LAYING NOW.

By G. E. Conkey.

With the coming of October, spring hatched birds, especially Leghorns and other light weight breeds, should be in their winter quarters. Pullets should now be showing signs of starting to lay and if you neglect or are careless with them at this time you will delay their laying for weeks and it may even seriously affect their usefulness during the early months of winter.

House your pullets right and give them the proper care—pullets are naturally good winter layers and under the right conditions will lay reasonably early, help pay the feed bill and still be none the worse for it.

Make up your mind to do the thing right this year and don't let bad weather catch you unprepared. First of all, make sure you have enough room for your flock and their after you have everything in shape move the birds into their new quarters.

Give the house a good whitewashing, make necessary repairs and wash the windows so that plenty of light and sunshine will come in. Light and sun shine are wonderful aids to good health, and vigorous red-blooded hens and pullets are the only kind that will lay during winter weather.

Cloth-covered openings should have new cloth or at least the cloth should be washed, for after a season's use the pores of the goods are sure to be filled with dust. Write for Extension Circular No. 28.

Recipes for Corn Meal Yeast Bread, Potato Yeast Bread, Nut Bread, Rye Biscuit, Rolled Oats Muffins, Molasses Corn Cake and many others in the New Circular prepared by Home Economics Extension Service, University of Maine.

"WAR BREADS" is the title of Home Economics Extension Circular No. 28, recently issued by the University of Maine Extension Service. It is "full up" with bread recipes which will make it easy for the housewives to prepare for Wednesday and Thursday, the days upon which the Food Administration has asked that we eat no white bread. Copy of the circular may be obtained free from the Extension Department, University of Maine, Orono, Maine. The recipes given below are taken from the circular. Use these until you receive your copy. Make every Wednesday and Thursday white-breadless days.

Corn Meal Bread.

Three cups corn meal, 6 cups bread flour, 3 cups liquid (1-2 milk, 1-2 water), 1 yeast cake, 3 tablespoons shortening, 3 tablespoons sugar, 4-1-2 teaspoons salt.

Measure salt, sugar, and shortening into bread mixer or mixing bowl. Boil the water and scald the milk and pour over the other ingredients keeping out 1-4 cup of the water in which to soften the yeast. When this water is lukewarm, soften the yeast in it and add this and the corn meal to the mixture in the bowl. Beat thoroughly. Gradually work in the bread flour until the dough is of such consistency that it does not stick to the hand. Cover tightly and let it rise until it doubles in bulk. Then knead until the dough is fine grained, mold into loaves and put in greased pans and let rise again. When the loaves have doubled in bulk the pans should be well filled. Bake in a moderately hot oven 50 to 60 minutes. Remove from pans and cool.

If a yeast cake is combined with hot water the leavening power is lost.

Potato Bread.

Three pounds of boiled peeled potatoes, 2 1-4 pounds of bread flour, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 1-2 tablespoons salt, 4 tablespoons lukewarm water, 2 yeast cakes.

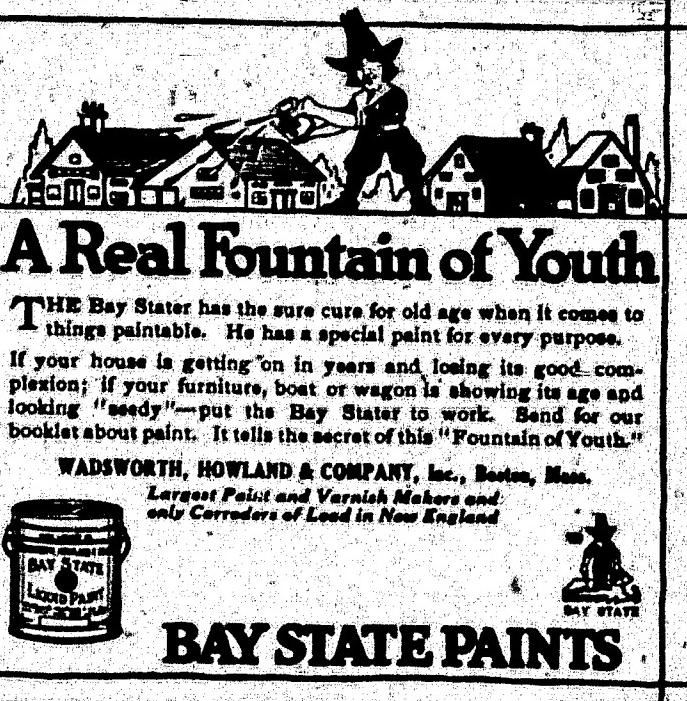

Wash, boil, peel, and mash thoroughly about 12 medium sized potatoes. Let them cool until lukewarm. Rub the yeast smooth in 4 tablespoons lukewarm water and add to the potato. Then add the salt, sugar, and 1 cup of the flour. Mix thoroughly—do not add any more water. Set to rise in a warm place. When light the dough will have become soft and moist. Add the remainder of the flour and knead until smooth and elastic. Set the dough to rise again until trebled in volume. Then cut into four parts, mold into loaves, put into greased pans, and set to rise until doubled in size. Bake for 50 minutes in an oven of good, steady heat. This amount makes four one-pound loaves of bread.

AN OPERATION AVERTED

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago, I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides and was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I soon noticed a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure."—Mrs. THOMAS MCCORMACK, 3000 Hartville Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE OLD FLAG FOREVER.
Frank L. Stanton in the Atlanta Constitution.
She's up there—Old Glory—where Lightnings are sped;
She dazes the nations with tipples
of red,
And she'll wave for us living, or drown o'er us dead—
The flag of our country forever!

She's up there—Old Glory—how bright
the stars stream!
And the stripes like red signals of Liberty gleam!
And we dare for her, living, or dream
the last dream
With the flag of our country forever!

She's up there—Old Glory—no tyrant dares to stand;
No blue on her brightness, no stain
on her stars!
The brave blood of heroes hath crimsoned
her bars—
She's the flag of our country forever!

THE SACRIFICE.
It isn't the fact that your brother has
gone,
That makes the great sacrifice day,
But that there is the light of the alien down
With the soldiers of freedom stands alone.

It's a clear, deep gladness for all of us
dear,
They our own have been called and have stood Like heroes of old, with no tremor of fear.
For the sake of the whole world's

"OPPORTUNITY."
By Walter Malone.

They do me wrong who say I come as more
When once I knock and fail to find you in
For every day I stand outside your door
And bid you wake and rise and light to win.
Wait not for precious chances passed away, Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day.

At sunrise every soul is born again
Lough like a boy of splendor fast have sped.

To vanish joy be blithed and draft
and dash:
My judges seat the dead past with
the dead,

But never wish a moment yet to come.

Though sleep is sure, wring not your hands and weep,
I bring my arm to all who say, "I can."

No atmosphere without even such as this
But a slight one who do signs a man.

Dear then herself thy best youth all against!

Dear soul from righteous tribule
there's blow!

Then turn from blighted arches of the past.

And had the future's page while
as now:

Art thou a mortal? Rouse thou from thy spell!

Art thou a mortal? She may be forgiven.

Dark morning gives thee wings to flee
from hell,

Dark night a star to guide thy feet
to heaven.

GONE.

By Catherine Powers.

His Presence hangs on the hall rock there's still the ghost of his step as too soft,
And the room breathes so strong of his presence I find myself seeking him out.

And I say to his pictures, "He's left us!" And I say to his books
"We're alone."

And my eyes fill with tears, and my heart's sick with fear.

But we couldn't keep Jimmie at home.

It wasn't for honor or glory, it wasn't for love of the flag.

The war caused a great growing bar red, writhing snare and snare
each day.

For the soldiers of America were unprepared, and Oklahoma, home
my state said,

Sought a recruiting call for American girls.

And we couldn't keep Jimmie at
home.

Who can judge of the hosts of her say? Who can say of what loyal it's made?

says about Home-Made Bread and how much she can save on her household expenses.*

Look at this Bread!

If you could only actually see it, smell it and taste it!

Yes, I baked it myself. It's very little trouble and it's lots better than I can buy.

Then too, it means a big saving. I am cutting down on my meat bills because the family is eating so much more bread. They seem to like it better than the more expensive foods.

Even if I were not saving on my other bills, I am still saying, almost half on the bread itself.

You can do the same thing. It's not hard. All you need is a good recipe and a good flour.

The flour that I use is wonderfully easy to work with. It's made in Ohio —right in the Miami Valley where the soft winter wheat has an unusual quality on account of the rich limestone soil. It's good for everything, and it gives a most delicious nutty flavor to try, it's something the God of the gods gave.

It's bigger and finer than self is, up on it our ideals have grown;

It's American blood, and it's true to the soil.

And we won't keep Jimmie at
home.

So we're here with the ghost of his presence, and the pictures are books in the room.

And the Panama bags on the hall
rock, and we say, "He'll be com-

And we're thinking thoughts in the night watching that thousands of others have known,

But we're praying we're fit, and we're doing our bit.

And we didn't keep Jimmie at
home.

OUT THERE.

By Margaret E. Baugher, Jr., in the Christian Herald.

Out There, Out There, he is—just a boy, that's all—daughter sparkled in his eyes—he was always singing;

Just a boy who answered when he heard his country call;

(Somewhere, Out There, he is—how my thoughts go winging!)

Ready to do or dare,

(Little sunlight was his halo)

Just a boy, a smiling boy,

Somewhere, Out There.

It's my wheel today, knitted in my spinning—

God, my eyes were blue—blue
as the sea—

Somewhere, Out There, he is—smiling at me with his carefree heart, come back to me—

Just the racing bare.

(God, can you hear my prayer?)

Keep him, my boy, from home—

Somewhere, Out There.

THE COUNTRY CALL.

When older nations went to war,
We proudly hit loud;

For which one might be in the wrong
We had no certain proof.

Now when the deadly submarine sank all within their path;

Dove up men to make them
And themselves to the death.

Come all young men, who have not died.

Mrs. Winslow Abbott was killed in Glastonbury, Monday, by the death of her brother-in-law, Mr. Johnson. Mrs.

Arthur Bennett kept house during her absence.

From East, from West, from North
South, From Italy or France;

Whatever nation gave you birth
Now fight for Uncle Sam.

No black, no white, no red, nor brown,
But brothers one and all;

Now rally at your country's need,

Together stand or fall.

Like the boys of seventy-six
Now leave the plow and spade;

And answer to your country's call Fathered but not afraid.

for a short time and from there they will go to Springfield, Mass., and visit Mrs. Heldner's son, Henry Howe.
Later they intend going to some place in the South for the winter as Mr.
Heldner is in poor health.

Omond K. Clifford and family have moved from their house on Oxford street into the Rice house on High street, which Mr. Clifford has purchased. The Graves families have vacated the Rice house and moved into one of the Bolster houses on Myrtle street.

The friends of Mrs. Martha Evans will be sorry to learn that she is failing in health again. Mr. Evans intending coming home and opening her home again this week, but her health will not permit. She is with her sister, Mrs. Carrie Lane, of Upton.

Mrs. Alice Crommett and little daughter, Esther, who have been spending some time with Mrs. Esther Ryerson, have gone to Philadelphia where they will spend some time with Mrs. Crommett's parents.

Ernest F. Clayton of Lisbon Falls, formerly principal of Paris High school, has recently called on friends in town.

Miss Nora Martin left her home Saturday for Caribou, where she is to teach during the coming year. The schools are late commencing on account of the harvesting.

Rev. G. Howard Newton, pastor of the Baptist church, was in Rockland
last week as a delegate to the State
Sunday School convention. His brother, Rev. J. Edward Newton, pastor of the Rockland Congregational church has been given a year's absence and started last Wednesday for France, where he will take up Y. M. G. A. work at the front.

Miss Lena Frank of Rockland, formerly principal of Paris Grammar school, is a guest of Mrs. Harold Plotter.

An old fashioned bucking bee was held Thursday evening at the Judkins farm on Elm Hill. About 25 friends and neighbors were present and a very enjoyable evening was spent husking corn and playing games.

The Deering Memorial Methodist church has just received a donation of $400.00 from George Deering of Chicago.

The Stone house on the corner of High and Gothic streets, recently purchased by Clarence G. Morton is undergoing quite extensive repairs. There are two very large plate glass windows being put in, also a large veranda on the side. The house won't be ready for occupancy for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Barrows have moved into their new home on the new street that leads from Main to Maple street.

There have been 300 woolen pieces knit for the soldiers by members of the South Paris branch of the Service League since the last box was shipped to Paris. These include sweatshirts, sleeping caps, helmets, mufflers, winter hats, and bed socks.

Rosa E. Chapman returned Wednesday from Portland, where he had been for ten days in a hospital, for surgical treatment of one of his feet.

In spite of adverse weather conditions, some good sweet corn was grown in South Paris this season. On John McGee's farm $118.02 worth of corn was picked from eighty-one hundreds of an acre. This is producing sweet corn at the rate of $14.00 per acre exclusive of the fodder. This is a big yield for this season.

Harold T. Thayer will attend the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows in Part-ton this week, as representative of Mt. Meigs Lodge. Chester Aldrich goes to the Grand Encampment as representative of Aurora Encampment.

Catarrh of Stomach

Mrs. Mary Fennell, R. F. D., Pomon, Missouri, writes:

"I wish you a few words in the paper of Parsons. I have used it with good results for cramps in the stomach. Also found it very good for catarrh of the head. My sister was cured of catarrh of stomach by the use of Peruna."

Mrs. E. T. Chomer, 69 East 42nd St., Chicago, Ill., says: "Manan is laxative on the market for liver and bowels, very good for indigestion and heart burn."

Those who object to liquid medicine can secure Peruna tablets.

WHAT LIFE IS ON THE YUKON RIVER.

Little Stories of Mining Camps, Indian Villages, Wood Camps, Gold Strikes And Human Bones. Hell's Pass, 5-Finger Rapids. The Route Down Which Gold-Mad Men Stampeded to Nome as They Rushed to Dawson.

(M. J. Brown)

The man who makes the Yukon fly trip from Dawson to St. Michael will never regret it, but he will never make it but once—unless he is obliged to.

After Dawson is left the schedule is a long trip of uncertainty and discomfort—and they grow worse as the lower river is reached. "Tourists are damned," I heard the first mate say to another officer, "get the freight."

But the discomforts, anxieties and uncertainties come later on. For the first thousand miles the trip was most interesting, and with the weather warm and bright, it was with keen enjoyment that we sat day after day on the deck, and watched many places of interest along the crooked stream.

The upper river Indians live today as they lived before the first Russian ever came up the Yukon—they exist. They care nothing for the white man's gold—salmon is what they want, fish for their bellies and the dogs' before the long arctic night sets in. So they build fish wheels of logs and poles, anchor them near the shore at a point where the fish are likely to "run" and the wheel never stops turning while the summer lasts.

The fish are dressed and dried. You will see hundreds of red salmon hanging from poles. When thoroughly dried they are stored in caches on the top of a framework of poles, six or eight feet from the ground, where the dogs and bears cannot get to them. The Indians trap some in the winter and if they can catch more fish than they need, they sell the fish and furs to the river town stores, or either trade them for the few supplies they need.

The most of the Indian villages are very old. The log cabins are sitting down and vegetation grows a foot high from the dirt roofs. They live in horribly filthy conditions. The Indians are here at Dawson with a face that urges me to join them. But a thirty-mile launch trip did not appeal to me, so I decided to stick to boat and perhaps drop off after I left the town.

The next day I asked the pilot to land my boat at Forty Mile, for I was told if the town looked bad to me, as I decided to stick to boat and perhaps drop off after I left the town.

"Nothing doing," he replied. "Your trip will allow you to live over night, but the Canadian government won't. You are on an American river, so you cannot go in Canadian territory." And then he remarked, "I would rather not to stop at Forty Mile."

In the morning we reached Forty Mile and the boat remained long enough to unload a load of freight and to wait for the mail. The crowd was small. There are very few people here.

At Kilkenny, a mile away, there were thirty-five houses, and I stood on the bank of the steamer and saw the people of the town.

There are right about three thousand people here, and they are all here because the town is the center of a great mining camp.

A dozen log cabins, a dilapidated road house, a wireless station, a gas store, and a couple of red-roofed houses. Mounted Police. That was Forty Mile—the wonderful Northland had told me about Forty Mile.

This was the home she was seeking and hastened to get back to. The wireless man told me there were only two white women within a radius of 50 miles square; that the rest of the miners had left the country and the town would soon be deserted.

"Even the road house has no license papers, and the town is gone now," he moaned.

Forty Mile has had an up and down existence. There is gold there, but not rich ground, no big strikes, and the men again just when the camp was settled down to a slow but steady producing proposition, there would come news of a big strike some place down the river and the miners would stampede for it like a flock of sheep—grabbing anything that would float.

I learned that the husband of the woman who had died for want of business had died for want of business. A dozen log cabins, a dilapidated road house, a wireless station, a gas store, and a couple of red-roofed houses. Mounted Police. That was Forty Mile—the wonderful Northland had told me about Forty Mile.

The next day we reached the land of the Miners. We were passing between White Horse and Nome, 230 miles. I quit sailing fast with the wind and the slow eight-mile speed of the boat.

About every twenty-four hours the boat had to stop at a wood camp for wood, and it takes a long time for the boat to carry enough of the four-foot sticks on board to last to the next camp.

At Wessobrough's creek, about 50 miles over the line in Alaska, we stopped early in the morning to "wind up" and wait for the fog to lift. I was about the only passenger up. The captain told me the boat could not sail.

Amidst the fog the captain says Kali has abdicated in favor of I wanted to stretch my legs I would find a good trail back of the wood pile that led to a deserted cabin, half a mile down. I hiked.

It was a miners' cabin, logs, with floor of whipsawed lumber. The old stove was there, the rough benches, table, bunk and other odds and ends. It was at the end of a draw, where a little stream ran down the valley and emptied into the Yukon. The deserted mine was back from the shore and I did not have time to go to it.

And now for the story—the captain told it to me. Two prospectors struck a prospect in the summer that looked good, so they built the cabin, caught fish and prepared for winter. It was late in summer before they had winter preparations made, and could go on with the prospect hole. They struck bed rock at 12 feet and found a wonderfully rich pocket. They worked it out, thawed down other holes, but never another sign of color, then one of them being taken sick, they abandoned the place and went down the river on the ice, and the sick man died before they reached Fort Dawson.

Now for the rest of the story—or rather the other version.

As the boat passed the deserted cabin, a lady pointed to a peculiar looking cache on top of a platform just below the cabin and asked a miner what it was. In the fog I had not noticed this when I was at the cabin. It looked from the boat as if a kayak (skin canoe) had been put up there and wound with an old tent. But the miner said it was a dead body, now only a skeleton, and had been there four or five years. He said the sick man died in camp, his partner put him on the meat cache and beat it down the ice.

I afterwards asked the pilot if the story was true. "That's the tale; I don't know. But it is the truth that you can't get an Indian woodchopper to get anywhere near the cabin," he answered.

I have no doubt but that it was true, and that under that old canvas is the skeleton remains of a man, and that some father or mother outside is waiting and hoping for news of a son or daughter. They—news that will never come. Alaska is full of such tragedy.

Anywhere there is a white man the boat will stop—that is if he hasn't got out for a box of freight—gravel, the skeleton remains of a man, and that some father or mother outside is waiting and hoping for news of a son or daughter. They—news that will never come. Alaska is full of such tragedy.

At one place we stopped and tied up to pick up a little bunch of yuccas. There was one blossoming plant, a half dozen "husky" dogs and the usual meat house. A man and his wife lived there, and they were running right on the river bank. He was about 15, she about 60. They had run down a place about ten feet above the water's level. They had a brother and a sister. The dog was maimed and then water dashed upon the rocks and poured in, one of the houses was broken in, and the house was pulled down. Thus, Mr. H. B. Wheatley on the safeguards.

Thirteenth Century Fire Prevention. One wonders what fate would have overtaken the captured starter of fires in thirteenth century London, for after the blaze of 1212, which lasted ten days, swallowed up part of London bridge and was the cause of over 1,000 deaths, every precaution was taken against fire. For instance, all builders of houses were ordered to roof them with tiles, shingle boards or lead, and to stop an outbreak any house could be pulled down. Thus, Mr. H. B. Wheatley on the safeguards.

Sinking of the Caspian Sea.

Geologists claim that the Caspian sea is continually sinking. Known to all schoolboys as the largest interior body of water in the world, the Caspian is about 730 miles in greatest length and 330 miles in extreme width. Its area is estimated to be 170,000 square miles, while the area of Angleland and Wales is 58,000 odd square miles.

The old lady how it was sinking out. "Oh, just fair," she said, but it is worth $100 an acre." And then she looked at me a queer and vacuous look. "Oh, it is so bad, we are going to sink here." And it was left breathless and silent.

And, I thought of the day when a gold man came down the river to a continuous string of islands, boats, rafts—anything that would float. And they carried with them their all, the grub stake and the few necessary tools and telling few of them knew anything about the dangerous rapids, few even knew they were there until they were onto them, and then in a minute they must decide on which channel—and take the chance. However, the most of them instinctively saw that the thumb, the big channel, was the safest pass, and if they got their boats full in the current they were safe. If they did not, they were dashed against the rocks, and they tell me few ever came out alive who were overturned.

Then came Hell's Pass—a place where the Yukon runs down hill for a short distance. It was a scary rapids to look at even from a steamer's deck. These were no breakers, but I expected that any small boat could go through this whirling, foaming rapids and not capture. But they did, thousands of them.

And after I had seen these two rapids I had to be the way, the only ones between White Horse and Nome, 230 miles. I quit sailing fast with the wind and the slow eight-mile speed of the boat.

I learned that the husband of the woman who had died for want of business was foreman of a dredge outfit, but an English company had long been operating on the Forty Mile.

It was that one dredge was about the other would soon be, as it had been worked out.

As we sat on the bank watching the dredge haul up the store fixtures, the men had rushed down, very much, and hauled on a baleful passenger on deck called to us to know what it was, so I mounted the steps, summoned up my energy and said,

A LEGEND OF MEXICO.

Origin of the Eagle and Serpent on Its Coat of Arms.

The coat of arms of the republic of Mexico, which occupies the center or white bar of the flag and consists of a beautiful device representing an eagle perched upon a cactus (what in Mexico is called nopal) devouring a serpent, is intimately connected with the history of the people. In the beginning of the fourteenth century the ancient Mexicans, or Aztecs, after wandering for a long time around the Mexican valley looking for a place to build their city, arrived after terrible sufferings and adventures on the southwestern border of Lake Texcoco in 1227.

There they halted, for in front of them they beheld what naturally they considered an auspicious omen from their gods. An immense royal eagle of extraordinary size and beauty stood upon a cactus growing in the crevice of a rock washed by the waves of the lake. In its talons it held a serpent and its broad, beautiful wings spread wide.

Obeying the mandate of their oracle that they should build their city, they set to work, and by driving piles into the marshes with no other material at hand but frail reeds and reches the foundations of the great Tenochtitlan, the chief city of the Aztecs and the site of the modern City of Mexico, were laid.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE "ENTENTE CORDIALE."

Bismarck Once Gave a Striking Definition of the Term.

In the newspapers of today we very often find the words entente cordiale. Most readers understand the meaning of the expression, but it is rather difficult to make a translation that expresses the exact meaning of the original French. Prince Bismarck gave a good explanation when his daughter asked him what an entente cordiale really was.

"Well," he said, "it is not so easy to define literally. It means a cordial understanding, but it also has a little different significance. For example: You were in the courtyard this morning when I came from the garden with Nero. Diana was in the yard, gnawing a large bone. My Nero saw her and ran to seize the bone. Then there was a little fight, until I struck them a sharp blow with my cane and drove them apart.

"After that the bone lay in the middle of the court, while both dogs stood off at some distance and looked eagerly at it. Each dog, in fact, was as anxious to keep the other away as was the other to get the bone for itself."
